

CONTENTS.

No.	Page
55. THE gay widow's impatience of the growth of her daughter. The history of Miss Maypole.....	1
56. The necessity of complaisance. The Rambler's grief for offending his correspondents.....	7
57. Sententious rules of frugality.....	13
58. The desire of wealth moderated by philosophy....	18
59. An account of Suspirius the human screech-owl..	25
60. The dignity and usefulness of biography.....	28
61. A Londoner's visit to the country.....	33
62. A young lady's impatience to see London.....	40
63. Inconstancy not always a weakness.....	45
64. The requisites to true friendship.....	51
65. Obidah and the hermit, an eastern story.....	56
66. Passion not to be eradicated. The views of women ill directed.....	61
67. The garden of hope, a dream.....	66
68. Every man chiefly happy or miserable at home. The opinion of servants not to be despised.....	71
69. The miseries and prejudices of old age.....	76
70. Different men virtuous in different degrees. The vicious not always abandoned.....	81
71. No man believes that his own life will be short....	86
72. The necessity of good humour.....	91
73. The lingering expectation of an heir.....	96
74. Peevishness equally wretched and offensive. The character of Tetrica.....	102
75. The world never known but by a change of fortune. The history of Melissa.....	107
76. The arts by which bad men are reconciled to themselves.....	113
77. The learned seldom despised but when they deserve contempt.....	118
78. The power of novelty. Mortality too familiar to raise apprehensions.....	124
79. A suspicious man justly suspected.....	129
80. Variety necessary to happiness. A winter scene..	134
81. The great rule of action. Debts of justice to be distinguished from debts of charity.....	139

OCT 30 1793 ALLEN

D OF M BINDER SEP 4 1793

451432

CONTENTS.

No.		Page
82.	The Virtuoso's account of his rarities	144
83.	The Virtuoso's curiosity justified	150
84.	A young lady's impatience of control	155
85.	The mischiefs of total idleness.....	161
86.	The danger of succeeding a great author: an introduction to a criticism on Milton's versification	167
87.	The reasons why advice is generally ineffectual..	173
88.	A criticism on Milton's versification. Elisions dangerous in English poetry	178
89.	The luxury of vain imagination.....	184
90.	The pauses in English poetry adjusted....	189
91.	The conduct of patronage, an allegory	195
92.	The accommodation of sound to sense, often chimerical	201
93.	The prejudices and caprices of criticism.....	210
94.	An inquiry how far Milton has accommodated the sound to the sense.....	215
95.	The history of Pertinax the sceptic.....	223
96.	Truth, falsehood, and fiction, an allegory.....	229
97.	Advice to unmarried ladies.....	234
98.	The necessity of cultivating politeness.....	241
99.	The pleasures of private friendship. The necessity of similar dispositions.....	246
100.	Modish pleasures.....	251
101.	A proper audience necessary to a wit	256
102.	The voyage of life.....	262
103.	The prevalence of curiosity. The character of Nugaculus.....	267
104.	The original of flattery. The meanness of venal praise	273
105.	The universal register, a dream	278
106.	The vanity of an author's expectations. Reasons why good authors are sometimes neglected.....	283
107.	Properantia's hopes of a year of confusion. The misery of prostitutes.....	289
108.	Life sufficient to all purposes if well employed ...	295
109.	The education of a fop.....	300
110.	Repentance stated and explained. Retirement and abstinence useful to repentance	306
111.	Youth made unfortunate by its haste and eagerness.....	312